A Story of Hope

Lizzie* walked into one of our centers last year, concerned she might be pregnant. A positive pregnancy test confirmed her fear, and she discussed a number of reasons why abortion would be her best option. "Besides, I had an abortion when I was a teenager, and everything turned out fine," Lizzie shared. We expressed sympathy for her past abortion and offered her an ultrasound scan which she accepted. Lizzie was early in her pregnancy and no heartbeat was detected. We invited her to come back for a follow-up scan a few weeks later.

Lizzie returned for her second appointment. She cried after seeing her baby and hearing its heartbeat. We thought the scan was a turning point for her, but she asked for abortion information on her way out the door. Over the next week, we reached out to Lizzie twice. Both times she expressed confusion and concern regarding the pregnancy. We responded to her fears with love and compassion. Then, we called Lizzie a third time. "I have made my decision," she said, "...and I'm going to carry my child!"

We celebrated with Lizzie and congratulated her on the courageous decision to parent her baby. Finally, we thanked God for another precious life saved from abortion!
