A Story of Hope

Kate* and her boyfriend came to the Women's Center to see how far along she was in her pregnancy. Kate had been clean in a drug rehab program for seven years, but recent significant stressor had led to a relapse. She had considered abortion, but she didn't think she could go through with it. However, she was also scared because she had not felt the baby move recently, and she had been unsuccessful in her attempts to stay clean. The consultant talked with Kate after her positive pregnancy test, and in addition to the positive packet, gave her information on Brightview recovery and treatment programs, as well as Brigid's Path.

Kate and her boyfriend had an ultrasound and met their beautiful 20 week-old baby, who moved plenty during the scan. They were both excited to see their baby in 4-D and hear the strong heartbeat. Afterward, Kate's boyfriend said he was glad it was probably too late for an abortion now, and Kate agreed. Kate told us that this appointment had given her the motivation she needed to stay clean moving forward. They left with lots of adorable baby scan photos, a boy layette, and smiles from ear to ear.
